Bronx-Westchester
Area Health Education Center

Bronx-Westchester Area Health Education Center (BW AHEC) is an organization that provides health-career, education, exploration, and experience for high school, undergraduate, graduate, and health professions students. Our goal is to provide future health professionals with internship opportunities in medically underserved areas that will prepare them to address health equity challenges, and improve health outcomes in those communities.

Programs

Opioid Prevention Education Project (OPEP) is a NYS AHEC initiative that delivers education on the opioid crisis and opioid overdose prevention to high school students, college students, and members of the community. (Year Round)

Summer Health Internship Program (SHIP) is an exploratory learning opportunity for upper-level high schoolers and early college students that places them in hospitals, clinics, and health-based community organizations to be exposed to various health careers and health issues. (Summer only)

Healthy Communities Internship Program (HCIP) places upper level college students, post bacc students, health professions students, and postgraduate students into community health-based organizations that address issues surrounding health disparities. (Summer only)

AHEC Scholars is an interdisciplinary learning program for health profession students in their last two years of schooling. Students participate in a 2-year program where they will complete 80 hours of health-related experiential learning and online learning each year. (Year round)
